ITALY. - Most people regard the Italians as an in-ferior nation in point of numbers as well as many other respects. The truth is, Italy possesses a population almost as large as that of the United States. She has twenty seven million of inhabitants, about one out of every six hundred of whom are Protestants. The beauty, fertility and excellence of the country for all that goes to support and adorn life, are well known, and the population increases with remarkable rapidity as in Tuscany and Sicily, for example, it doubles in 73 years. Yet with these advantages for growth, for agriculture, manufactures, the Fine Arts, there is no country in Europe at so low a point
